

THE BEST OF BRITISH

COMMISSIONS HAVE COME from NASA scientists, Tour de France riders, even customers who collect bikes as art to hang on their walls. One has 200, yet has never ridden any of them. Poshbikes designs and builds bicycles that cost up to £25,000 – making them possibly the most expensive on the planet. It has also built the lightest bike in the world, weighing just 4kg. The kind of care, precision and specialism that goes into a Poshbike can be judged from the use of handmade parts such as carbon brakes, where each fibre is individually and painstakingly laid to produce a product half the weight of its nearest competitor.

The company's signature bike, and perhaps the coolest piece of pedal power you'll ever see (pictured) was put together for a customer who wanted a bicycle to match his new black and gold Porsche 911GT2. Just one problem: you're going to need one helluva secure bike lock.
